

Introduction – History of the SexTV Accession

History of the SexTV Program

SexTV, an original CityTV program, began airing in 1998. The show follows a documentary format featuring several stories on different aspects of sex and sexuality per half hour weekly episode. Due to the show's general interest mandate, a very wide variety of topics are covered (see episode guide). The show was nominated for Gemini Awards seven times between 2000 and 2007 and won in the category of "Best Lifestyle/General Interest Series" in 2004. In 2001, the series was spun-off into a national category 2 specialty channel called "SexTV: the channel," which broadcasts a variety of original and syndicated programming on sex and sexuality. SexTV continues to air as part of SexTV: the channel's programming. The channel and the program, however, are no longer affiliated with CityTV because CityTV's umbrella company, CHUM, was purchased by Bell Globemedia in 2006.

Scope of the SexTV Accession

The SexTV Accession includes around 1000 materials, 896 of which are published books. Themes covered by the books include: instructional (on dating, marriage, sex life), fiction, biographical, scholarly and artistic monographs. Furthermore, the Accession includes non-book materials such as: pamphlets, Japanese souvenir programs, VHSs, DVDs, magazines and catalogues. In addition to the published material, the Accession also includes a large quantity of unpublished material related to the aforementioned published material such as: letters from publishers, invoices and research notes.

The materials in the Accession represent sources used to generate SexTV content as well as promotional items sent to SexTV by book publishers. The Accession, therefore, not only reflects what content was deemed relevant by television producers but also what sources publishing companies felt could be marketed to a show of this nature. As a result, the Accession reflects what Toronto-based media and publishing companies felt was content relevant to general interest sex-related programming the late 20th century.

Organization of the SexTV Accession

Data on the Accession has been entered into a master spreadsheet. Furthermore, due to the large quantity of published materials, a major portion of the Accession is also organized following the Library of Congress classification system. This information can be accessed by spreadsheets following Library of Congress. The materials are also physically organized with their Accession Number and LC call number written in pencil on the inside cover. Currently these are the only materials which are formally organized. Printed materials where LC call numbers were unavailable or the materials were deemed too fragile are currently separated. Materials related to the published sources continue to be kept tucked inside the published sources, which was the state they were found in. These materials are noted under the "Other Notes" subject field in relation to the main entries on the master spreadsheet.

Projects Undertaken

During the 2009 spring semester, work study students created the master spreadsheet and entered almost the entire collection on the spread sheet. These students also brainstormed possible ways to organize the collection, such as suggesting subject categories and investigating data organization programs.

During the 2009-2010 school year, the remaining materials were entered onto the master spreadsheet. Further investigation work was also conducted into possible ways to organize the collection because the brainstorming undertaken the year before was deemed insufficient. We consulted with professionals and performed an extensive literature review. Due to limited resources and man power, we decided to first organize the printed materials using Library of Congress but restricting the data entry to spreadsheets. As a result of being able to organize the printed materials, we were also able to perform an inventory verifying the physical presence of all the materials noted on the original spreadsheet.

Future Projects

As part of the 2009-2010 consultation process, it was determined that the materials relating to published matter currently being kept tucked within the published matter must be removed and organized based on archival standards. In order to do so, the materials would be placed into file folders based on the printed material from which they originated. These folders would be organized arbitrarily, most likely alphabetically by author or title. A separate guide may also be written outlining the contents.

Due to the sheer volume of materials in the Accession, it may also be useful in the future for the SRC to invest in a more sophisticated data management system. This would eliminate human error, speed up the data entry process, and enable for easier access by users.
